Fostering digital pedagogies through international cooperation_

Bled, Slovenia_
07.-09. 06. 2023_

Join us in Bled, Slovenia, at the upcoming conference, Fostering digital pedagogies through international cooperation, co-organised by the Academic Cooperation Association (ACA) and the Centre of the Republic of Slovenia for Mobility and European Educational and Training Programmes (CMEPIUS)!

The two-day conference features a keynote by renowned author and expert in Virtual Exchange, Robert O'Dowd, and Piet Van Hove, President, EAIE, as the conference moderator. There will be panels on digital pedagogies, bringing digital pedagogies into internationalisation, and good practice presentations. The conference will also provide dedicated space for lab sessions, giving participants the opportunity to reflect, exchange, and possibly co-develop new project ideas with facilitation offered by experts.

This conference brings together relevant stakeholders from higher education with a focus on supporting digital pedagogies. Panellists and participants will share experiences and best practices in the use of digital pedagogies to enhance international teaching and learning activities concerning student mobility and new mobility formats, COIL, joint programmes, etc. Drawing on discussions, panels and best practice presentations, participants will explore the challenges but also the potential of recent innovations, in terms of advancing education and international cooperation.

Will we see you there?

This conference is funded through the Training and Cooperation Activities (TCA) initiative. There is no registration fee but spaces are limited. If you are interested in attending, please contact your respective National Agency.

Confirmed Speakers_

Robert O'Dowd, Keynote Speaker

Robert O'Dowd is Full Professor for English Studies at the University of León, Spain. He has taught at universities in Ireland, Germany and Spain. He has published extensively on the application of Virtual Exchange in higher education and has been invited to be plenary speaker at international conferences in the US, Asia and across Europe. He is currently coordinating the Erasmus+ European Policy Experiment 'Virtual Innovation and Support Networks for Teachers' (VALIANT) and collaborates with organizations on the promotion and integration of Virtual Exchange in higher education across Europe. His most recent book is Internationalising Higher Education and the Role of Virtual Exchange (2023, Routledge).

Irina Ferencz is the Director of ACA and has been working in international higher education since 2008. Irina has specific expertise in the area of international student and staff mobility in the European context (data collections, trends, policies), as well as in planning, monitoring and assessing internationalisation activities at institutional and national level. She also has a growing interest in widening inclusion in internationalisation activities. Currently, she is also a PhD candidate at Ghent University, CHEGG, and an occasional reviewer for two higher education journals. She has authored and co-authored multiple publications in the field. Irina holds an MSc degree in European Politics and Policies (KULeuven, Belgium) and a Bachelor's degree in International Relations and European Studies (Universitatea Babeș-Bolyai, Romania). She is a Romanian national, speaks several languages and calls Belgium 'home'.

Piet Van Hove, Conference Moderator

Piet Van Hove is President (2022-24) of the European Association for International Education (EAIE) and Senior Policy Advisor for Internationalisation at the University of Antwerp, where he previously studied Law. He has been active in internationalisation since 1995, dealing with university-wide policy formulation and execution on different aspects of internationalisation, including student and staff mobility, development cooperation, services for international staff and students, international educational projects and strategic networking. Piet has been active in the leadership of several professional associations and nonprofits at the national and international level for many years, such as Flanders Knowledge Area, ACA, the NGO APOPO and the EAIE. He presents frequently on a wide range of topics related to internationalisation of higher education.

Chahira Nouira is currently working at the University of Göttingen, Germany as an Instructional Designer. Almost 15 years ago, Chahira has started her career as an educational technologist. While working at the United Nations University (UNU), she contributed to a few European projects about Open Educational Resources for European Universities and Virtual Mobility. The focus of her work is the development and implementation of methods and tools that help teachers and students strengthen their digital competences and enhance collaborative teaching and learning. Since December 2016, Chahira has been a member of the Digital Learning and Teaching team at the University of Göttingen. She first worked for the "Internationalisation of the Curricula" project and helped with the successful implementation of more than 30 digital and collaborative teaching initiatives. Since April 2020, she has been in charge of Digital Teaching and Learning in the DAAD funded IMKD project 'liveSciences³'.
